Sustainability

Sustainably delivering long-term value in a fast-changing world

The symbiotic relationship between a company and its stakeholders implies a notion of ‘corporate karma’ that can help a socially responsible business thrive in the long term.

Why invest?

A company’s relationship with the environment, its employees, suppliers, regulators, and customers plays a key part in determining its long-term business durability. Despite this, the market continues to largely focus on traditional financial metrics, persistently ignores these sustainability factors, and therefore can underestimate the fundamental value and long-term growth potential of a company. This market inefficiency creates investment opportunities for active investors to capitalise on.

Highlights

A unique approach to building a forward-looking sustainable portfolio

A detailed assessment of sustainability is incorporated into our research process via our proprietary Sustainability Quotient (SQ) framework.

This is an in-depth, forward-looking, qualitative assessment of the long-term sustainability of a company’s business model and growth prospects based on stakeholder relationships. This helps us identify ‘good’ companies that are also good investments.

Bringing together Schroders’ capabilities to uncover the sustainable winners of the future

A genuine collaboration between the Schroders’ Global & International Equity and Sustainability Teams, leveraging the strength of Schroders’ fundamental research resources and expertise on sustainability and stewardship.

We build upon the work by the Schroders dedicated Sustainability team, who conduct top-down thematic research across areas, such as climate change, the use of plastics and cybersecurity, that complements the bottom-up research carried out by the team.

Investing is only one piece of the puzzle, active engagement is key

Sustainable investing is as much about how we own companies as it is about those we choose to buy. As long-term shareholders, we regard ourselves as an active owner of the companies in which we invest. Engagement is therefore central to the strategy’s approach; we believe we can make positive changes to company practices and serve to improve shareholder returns and broader societal outcomes.

Our process

High conviction strategy aiming for durable returns

Schroder ISF Global Sustainable Growth is a patient capital, high-conviction global equity strategy that believes longterm value creation is shaped by a company's relationships with its stakeholders. We believe that acting sustainably, in the interest of all stakeholders, is an important driver to deliver long-term durable investment returns.

The 7 Stakeholders

Risk Considerations

- Performance risk: Investment objectives express an intended result but there is no guarantee that such a result will be achieved. Depending on market conditions and the macro economic environment, investment objectives may become more difficult to achieve.
- Operational risk: Operational processes, including those related to the safekeeping of assets, may fail. This may result in losses to the fund.
- Market Risk: The value of investments can go up and down and an investor may not get back the amount initially invested.
- Liquidity risk: In difficult market conditions, the fund may not be able to sell a security for full value or at all. This could affect performance and could cause the fund to defer or suspend redemptions of its shares.
- IBOR Risk: The transition of the financial markets away from the use of interbank offered rates (IBORs) to alternative reference rates may impact the valuation of certain holdings and disrupt liquidity in certain instruments. This may impact the investment performance of the fund.
- Emerging Markets & Frontier risk: Emerging markets, and especially frontier markets, generally carry greater political, legal, counterparty, operational and liquidity risk than developed markets.
- Derivatives risk – efficient portfolio management: Derivatives may be used to manage the portfolio efficiently. A derivative may not perform as expected, may create losses greater than the cost of the derivative and may result in losses to the fund.
- Currency risk: The fund may lose value as a result of movements in foreign exchange rates.
- Counterparty risk: The fund may have contractual agreements with counterparties. If a counterparty is unable to fulfil their obligations, the sum that they owe to the fund may be lost in part or in whole.
